DER SCHATTEN DES RIESEN

Seit Jahren schon lebt in einer alten, abgelegenen Festung ein einziger, geheimnisumwitterter Gefangener. Weder darf er Besucher empfangen noch das Tageslicht sehen. Niemand erinnert sich mehr an den Grund für seine Haft, aber sein Verbrechen muß furchtbar gewesen sein. Niemand kriegt diesen Gefangenen jemals zu Gesicht: Er ist ein lebender Tot, der hier keine andere Unterhaltung kennt als das Geschrei der Krähen.

Als der neue Kommandant Eugenio die Festungsleitung übernimmt, bringt er die junge Adele und ihren gemeinsamen Sohn Ottaviano in diese Einöde mit. Adele spielt liebend gern Klavier. Doch in der trostlosen Atmosphäre der Festung verändert sich ihr Wesen. Adele wird melancholisch.

Als sie eines Tages, nur für sich und ohne jede Begeisterung, ein Stück spielt, nimmt sie aus dem Hof Geigenklänge wahr. Sie kommen aus der Zelle des Gefangenen, und er spielt mit wahrer Hingabe. Adele ist wie gefangen von seinem Spiel. Tag um Tag musizieren nun die beiden miteinander, ohne sich je zu begegnen. Immer harmonischer klingt ihr Zusammenspiel, so als würden ihre Instrumente von derselben Hand geführt.

Eugenio und der kleine Ottaviano verfolgen dies mit Sorge. Ottaviano lebt in der Furcht, der Gefangene, den er stets nur als riesenhaften Schatten am Zellenfenster wahrnimmt, könne seine Mutter entführen. Eugenio wiederum ist nicht jener eiskalte Mann, als den ihn seine Untergebenen kennengelernt haben, sondern vielleicht ebenso einsam wie der Zelleninsasse ...

THE SHADOW OF THE GIANT

For years the old, remote fortress has held but a single prisoner, a man whose life appears to be shrouded in mystery. This prisoner is neither allowed to receive visitors, nor may he see the light of day. Nobody can remember the reason for his imprisonment but his crime must indeed have been terrible. Nobody has ever seen the prisoner. He is a living corpse who knows no form of entertainment other than the screams of the crows.

One day a man arrives in this wilderness to take up his new post as commander of the fortress. He is accompanied by the young Adele and their son, Ottaviano. Adele is a passionate piano player. But Adele soon becomes melancholy.

She is seated at the piano one day mechanically playing a piece of music when suddenly she hears the strains of a violin coming from the courtyard. The music appears to be coming from the prisoner's cell and is brimming over with emotion.

Adele is enraptured by the sound of the prisoner's music. Day after day, the two musicians play together, without ever seeing each other. And with each passing day their music begins to sound more and more beautiful and harmonious – almost as if their instruments were being played by one and the same person.

Eugenio and little Ottaviano are concerned by these events. Ottaviano worries that the prisoner – of whom he has only ever seen an enormous shadow on the cell wall – will somehow take his mother away from him. As for Eugenio, he is by no means the cold-hearted man his subordinates have so far taken him to be. In fact, he might perhaps be just as lonely as the inmate of the cell ...

L'OMBRE DU GEANT

Depuis déjà des années, la vieille forteresse à l'écart n'héberge plus qu'un seul et mystérieux prisonnier. Il ne reçoit aucune visite et il ne voit jamais la lumière du jour. Personne ne se souvient plus de la cause de son incarcération mais il a sûrement dû commettre un crime terrible. Personne ne le voit jamais car on lui passe ses repas à travers une étroite lucarne. C'est un véritable mort vivant.

Eugenio est le nouveau commandant de la forteresse. A son entrée en fonction, il s'installe dans ce coin perdu en compagnie de sa jeune femme, Adele, et de leur fils Ottaviano. Adele adore jouer du piano mais l'atmosphère désolante de la forteresse ne lui réussit pas. Elle sombre dans la mélancolie.

Un jour qu'elle s'est mise à jouer un morceau pour elle toute seule et sans grand enthousiasme, elle entend dans la cour les sonorités d'un violon. Cela vient de la cellule du prisonnier et il joue avec beaucoup de passion.

Adele est littéralement fascinée par sa musique. Ils se mettent à jouer régulièrement ensemble sans jamais se rencontrer. Leur duo est de plus en plus harmonieux, comme si c'était la même main qui dirigeait les deux instruments.

Eugenio et le petit Ottaviano se font du souci au sujet d'Adele. Ottaviano craint que sa mère ne se fasse enlever par le prisonnier dont il ne discerne que l'ombre géante derrière la fenêtre de la cellule. Eugenio, quant à lui, n'a rien de l'homme froid que connaissent ses subordonnés ; il se sent peut-être même aussi seul que l'occupant de la cellule ...

The Shadow of the Giant

Ci troviamo alla fine del diciannovesimo secolo in un castello abbandonato dove un capitano sorveglia un prigioniero misterioso. Non si è a conoscenza delle ragioni per le quali il prigioniero è stato preso, si sa solo che il crimine commesso è talmente grande che alla sua morte l'intero castello verrà distrutto. La giovane moglie del capitano, Adele riesce a combattere la solitudine della sua vita al castello suonando il piano. Un giorno, la donna ode il suono di un violino proveniente proprio dalla cella del prigioniero. Come per una strana ossessione, Adele è spinta magicamente a rispondere a queste note con il suono del suo pianoforte. Pallida e vestita di nero, Adele si siede continuamente di fronte al piano. Divaga quando il marito le domanda notizie del loro figlioletto.

La musica che condivide con il prigioniero la unisce passionalmente a lui quasi fino a consumarla. L'agonia del loro desiderio si riflette nella pazzia di questa stessa musica.

It is the late nineteenth century and in a remote and forbidding castle, a military captain is in charge of a mysterious prisoner. Nothing is known about the prisoner except that his crime is so great, that on his death the very castle will be destroyed. The captain's young wife Adele is terribly isolated in this outpost and can only play the piano to fight her loneliness. Then in a miraculous moment, she suddenly hears the notes of a violin piece the walls of the prisoner's cell. Slowly, obsessively, Adele is drawn into the spell of responding to the notes with her playing. Deathly pale in a black velvet gown, she sits constantly before the piano. She whispers distractedly to her officer husband when he questions her about their young son. The music she shares with the prisoner becomes a fatal all-consuming passion. The agony of their desire is reflected in the maddening, compulsive music of their longing.

The Shadow of the Giant

(L'ombra del Gigante)

It is the waning of the nineteenth century. In a remote and forbidding fortress castle, a military captain has been despatched to guard the prison's one mysterious inmate. Of this figure, kept in total eclipse, we know absolutely nothing except that for his suspected unspeakable atrocity, upon his death the very walls of the castle will be condemned to total destruction.

The captain's young wife, Adele, an elegant and conscientious woman in this forlorn outpost, muses aimlessly at the piano to quell the pangs of her lonely existence. Then, the miraculous moment, one day, when suddenly the celestial strains of a violin pierce the stone walls of the concealed prisoner's tomb-like cell: a flowing, pulsating call to which Adele's playing slowly becomes the supple and willing response.

The violin is insistent, irresistible, entralling. Adele, enraptured, is slowly taken captive by its relentless pull. Deathly pale in a black velvet gown, she now sits before the piano in a pool of flickering candlelight torn by flashes of violent lightning and the great windows thrown open to the storm. She whispers distractedly to her officer husband when he questions her about their little boy. The piano has become her only obsessive refuge from the leaden oppression of her life in the fortress prison.

As Adele and the enigmatic prisoner play on and on, their music slowly mingles into the ravaging crescendo of all-consuming, fatal passion. The agony of their desire is consummated through the maddening, compulsive music of their longing. And the compelling sonata by Cesar Franck (conducted by Emilio Morricone, with the film's soundtrack by Andrea Morricone) becomes the sweeping universe of their total surrender, the passionate driving force, romantic, intense, magic, of an inexorable and impossible love.

LIKENED TO THE MASTERPIECE "THE PIANO" MUSIC BECOMES THE SWEEPING UNIVERSE OF A MAGICAL, INTENSE, IMPOSSIBLE LOVE.

OF AN ALL-CONSUMING
FATAL PASSION,
THE AGONY OF
DESIRE CONSUMMATED
THROUGH MUSIC*

The late Paul Bowles was a gifted and prolific composer who pretty much stopped writing music when he moved from New York to Tangiers in the late 1940s. After turning to prose he wrote several accomplished books, including the critically acclaimed The Sheltering Sky.

A fan of his writings, director Owsley Brown later learned of Bowles' neglected musical legacy. Before Bowles' death, Brown conducted extensive interviews and, with Bowles' guidance, selected a number of compositions.

Brown set them to appropriately edited film sequences, including some vintage footage shot in the 1930s and 1940s by pioneer independent film-maker Rudy Burckhardt.

Editor/cinematographer Nathaniel Dorsky provided additional material and the result is a genuine visual and aural delight.

Brown is excited about his debut film being shown in Berlin. "Europeans are more receptive," he says, "a bit more willing to be engaged by a contemplative piece."

Owen Levy

L'Ombra Del Gigante (The Shadow Of The Giant)

Over 30 years after Ennio Morricone's haunting harmonica theme in Once Upon A Time In The West first sounded, Morricone here conducts another musical leitmotif forming a film's narrative crux: Cesar Frank's Sonata in A major. These notes will cement a mysterious and unearthly bond between a prisoner in a Northern Italian fortress and the wife of the captain sent to guard him.

The Italian army has devised an elaborate surveillance system for keeping the prisoner in check without ever actually seeing his face. He is perceived merely as a large shadow on the wall, until the captain's wife starts playing the piano to relieve the monotony of fortress life.

Roberto Petrocchi's film is a subdued, yet gripping period tale of longing and suppressed desire.

Peppermint

Fortyish, recently divorced aircraft engineer Stefanos buries himself in work to forget his basically non-existent private life. A phone call from long-lost school chum Manolis, inviting him to a party, shakes him out of his doldrums, triggering memories of his basically happy childhood, and particularly his cousin Marina.

Inseparable from an early age, their companionship develops into something deeper in adolescence, but their parents don't approve and Marina chooses another man. Stefanos eyes other girls, but has never completely got over Marina, even to this day.

Peppermint is a slyly funny coming-of-age story with charming performances, most notably Annie Loulou as Stefanos' sharp-tongued but loving mother and Giorgos Gerontikidis-Sempetadelis as 11-year-old Stefanos – if Al Pacino ever needs a young actor to portray him as a boy, intense-yet-sweet Gerontikidis-Sempetadelis should be on the short list.

L'ombra del gigante

Tieň obra / The Shadow of the Giant

Už roky žije v starej, vzdialenej pevnosti osamely, tajuplný väzeň. Nemôže prijať žiadneho návštěvника, nemôže vidieť denné svetlo. Nikto si už nespomene na príčinu jeho uväzenia, ale jeho zločin musel byť hrozný. Nikto tohto väzna nevidel; je žijúcou mŕtvou, ktorá nepozná žiadne iné rozptylenie okrem škrekotu vrán. Jeho bezútenský život sa však zmení prichodom nového veiteľa pevnosti Eugenia, jeho mladej ženy Adele a syna Ottaviana...

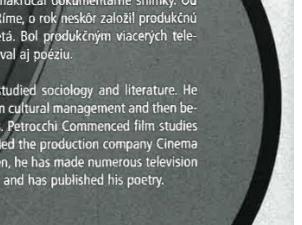

For years the old, remote fortress has held but a single prisoner, a man whose life appears to be shrouded in mystery. This prisoner is neither allowed to receive visitors, nor may he see the light of day. Nobody can remember the reason for his imprisonment but his crime must indeed have been terrible. Nobody has ever seen the prisoner. He is a living corpse who knows no form of entertainment other than the screams of the crows. But his forlorn life changes with the arrival of new commander Eugenio, his wife Adele and son Ottaviano...

„Film ako klam, film ako sen“

hovoríval Federico Fellini... a k jeho sloviam sa hľasi aj taliansky filmár Roberto Petrocchi, ktorý včera uviedol v sekcii Európsky film svoju snímku Tieň obra (1999) s veľmi bizarným príbehom.

• S akým námetom ste pri svojom tretom celovečernom filme pracovali?

- Film je nakrútený podľa fantastickej poviedky, adaptáciu ktorej som prípravoval spolu s jej autorkou. Vždy je veľmi ľahké vystihnúť celý film pár slovami. Tieň obra je podľa mňa o stretnutí dvoch duší, ktoré sú v zajatí. Duše zajatača väzna, ktorého nikto nikdy nevidel a duše ženy, manželky kapitána pevnosti. Mňa na tomto príbehu zaujalo najviac to, že medzi týmito ľudmi, vzniká prudký a intenzívny vzťah a to aj napriek tomu, že sa nikdy osobne nesetrali. Jediným spôsobom komunikácie je hudba. Zajatec je výborný huslistom a kapitánova manželka mu odpovedá hrou na klavíri. Vzťah prerastá v takú prudkú väseniu, ktorá ich napokon oboch zabije. Samozrejme, takýto príbeh môže mať rôzne interpretácie. Jednou z nich môže byť túžba po slobode, ktorú v sebe nosí každý z nás, ďalšou môže byť osamelosť, ktorou trpíme a ktorú často prekonávame práve pomocou hudby.

• Na MFF Bratislava sa predstavuje viacero talianskych filmov. Ako to podľa vás vyzerá v súčasnej talianskej kinematografii? Aké tendencie či prúdy v nej prevládajú?

- V súčasnom Taliansku ani zdaleka neexistuje hnuteľ, ktoré by aspoň vzdialene pripravilo taliansky neorealizmus. V súčasnosti talianskej kinematografii pôsobia veľa mladých a veľmi schopných režisériov, nezlučujú sa však do nijakeho špeciálneho prúdu. Nakrúca sa pomerne veľa kvalitných filmov v rôznorodých štýloch a žánroch. Starší režiséri – takí ako ja – by sa celkom potešili, keby vznikol podobný silný a intenzívny prúd ako neorealizmus. Žiaľ musíme konštatovať, že mladí tvorcovia sa už tak často nestretávajú a nemajú potrebu vyjadrovať sa k spoločnému tématu či podobným spôsobom...

• V minulosti ste sa zaoberala spoločenskými vedami, absolvovali ste sociológiu. Ovplyvnil tento vás záujem nejakým zásadným spôsobom váš prístup k tvorbe alebo sledovaniu filmov?

- V minulosti som sa venoval sociológií asi rovnako ako filozofii a literatúre. Myslím si, že ma k ceste filmára prirodzene pritiahal predovšetkým literatúra. Ale sociológia mi pomohla pochopíť realitu, aby som neskôr mohol vo filme robiť aj veci, ktoré s nou zdanivo nesúvisia. Myslím si, že autor môže sám seba obmieniť, skúsať nové cesty v každom novom filme. Pre mňa vždy pri fil-me boli, sú a ostanú dôležité: sen, tvorivosť a invenčia. Dovolim si na záver odčítať veľkého režiséra Federica Fellinija, ktorý hovoríval „kino ako klam, kino ako sen.“

Lubica Mistriková

SPACE FOR OUR GUESTS

„Film as an Illusion, Film as a Dream,“

as Federico Fellini used to say... and the Italian filmmaker Roberto Petrocchi subscribes to this. He presented his film The Shadow of the Giant (1999), with its bizarre story, in the European Film section yesterday.

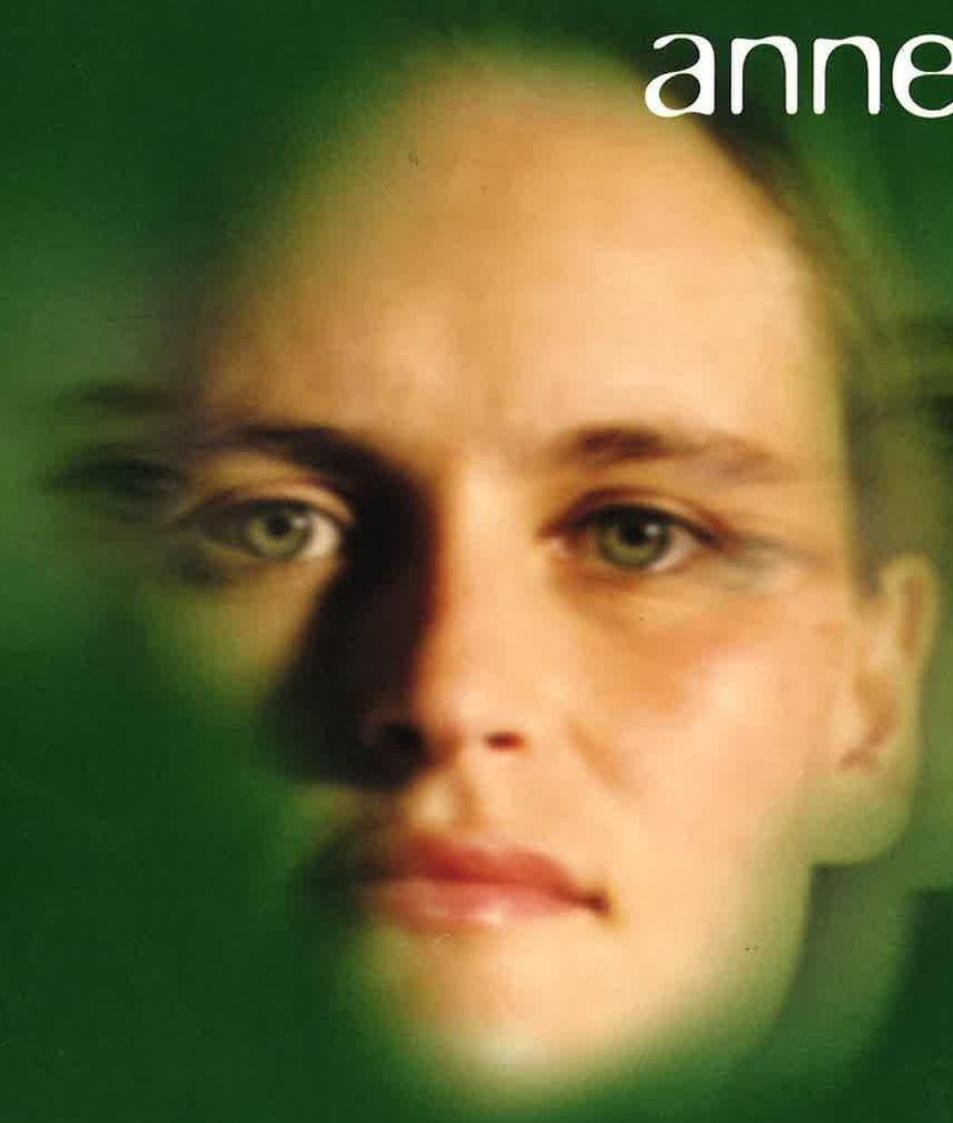

• What story did you work with in your third feature film?

- The film was made according to a fantasy story, adopted in cooperation with its author. It's very difficult to describe the film's substance in a few words. I think The Shadow of the Giant is about the meeting of two imprisoned souls. One is the soul of a prison inmate who has never been seen by anybody, and the other is the soul of a woman, the wife of the captain of the fortress. What I found most interesting about the story was the intensive relationship which developed between them despite the fact that they have never met. Their only means of communication is music. The prisoner is an exceptional violin player, while the captain's wife responds to him by playing the piano. Their relationship grows into a burning passion, and eventually kills both of them. Of course, such a story can have different interpretations. One of them says that it's about the desire for freedom which is deeply rooted in each one of us...

• In the past, you worked in the social sciences and graduated in sociology. Has this inrest of yours affected your view of filmmaking or film watching in any significant way?

- In the past, I paid just as much attention to sociology as to philosophy or literature. I believe it was literature which naturally drew me to filmmaking. But sociology allowed me to understand the reality so I could later try things in the film which were seemingly unrelated to it. I believe a filmmaker can change and try new paths in every new film. To me, three things have always been, and will always remain, important to me: a dream, creativity, and invention. To conclude, I'd like to quote the famous director, Federico Fellini, who used to say, „Cinema as an illusion, cinema as a dream“. (Im)

L'ombra del gigante

Roberto Petrocchi

Peut-être vers la fin du 19^e siècle au nord de l'Europe... Dans une forteresse abandonnée sur une hauteur désolée, un capitaine surveille le seul prisonnier qui s'y trouve pour de mystérieuses raisons. Le crime dont il est coupable est si grand qu'à la mort du prisonnier le château devra être rasé. La jeune femme du capitaine, Adele, essaie de combattre sa vie d'isolement dans ce château en jouant du piano. Un jour la femme entend le son d'un violon en provenance de la cellule du prisonnier. Entraînée par une force irrépressible, Adele en vient à répondre, dans une atmosphère magique, au son du violon par le son de son piano. Pâle et vêtue de noir, elle est constamment assise à son piano. Elle divague lorsque son mari lui demande des nouvelles de leur enfant. La musique qu'elle partage avec le prisonnier l'unit à lui et leur passion la consume. L'agonie de leur désir se reflète dans la folie de cette musique.

Roberto Petrocchi Roberto Petrocchi. Né à Rome en 1956, il y fait ses études de littérature et sociologie. Il a commencé à s'occuper de cinéma en développant des activités de documentariste et d'animateur culturel. En 1978 il fréquente le Centre Expérimental de Cinéma de Rome, section réalisation.
